COUNTY DETECTIVE SPEAKS ON CRIME IN YOUTH TODAY

Anthony Russo Addresses The Parent-Teacher Association
At Trevoise

IS WELL ATTENDED

Speaker Tells Parents That More Attention Must Be Paid To The Youths

TREVOISE, May 28—An interesting meeting of the Trevoise Parent-Teacher Association was held in the public school here last night when routine business was transacted and a program of speaking and entertainment given.

County superintendent of schools, J. Harry Hoffman, was present and addressed the group.

The meeting was in charge of C. Harrison, treasurer of the association. Anthony Russo, Bucks County detective, addressed the group upon the subject of "Crime in Youth."

"We have crime in youth because we have failed to provide youth with proper outlets and upbringing. Only in the rarest instances of diseased minds can we say that the first offender commits a crime because of deep laid faults in society, such as poverty, degeneracy and because their elders neglect them," said Mr. Russo.

"When youth commits crime, generally it is because of laxity in early discipline; because of apathy on the part of parents and neglect by those of the community who should help the helpless; because of distorted views, held by those who should know better and who have allowed their minds to take a downward course which can lead only to destruction.

"Today our crime is the work of the persons who have not reached their voting age." I believe that a prime factor in the disregard by youth for law, lies in an equal or greater disrespect for law and order on the part of the adult of our generation. We might seek to evade it, or excuse ourselves; nevertheless upon the shoulders of the parents rests the burden of this condition. It is a known fact that in most cases no youth ever developed an heroic ideal that was not first centered around his environment. And when the youngster begins to show disrespect of the law and order, you can be sure that he learned something of that attitude at home; or because those in his home failed to keep him in the right company."

Continuing the County Detective said:

"Now let us try and trace the growth of a criminal. True, there are exceptions where the following conditions do not apply, their divergence however, only prove the rule. All too often we find that the young criminal has come from a family where selfishness is predominant, it may be that the parents are concerned only with their own pleasures, leaving the youth to drift like a boat without a rudder, or it may be that they are poverty ridden, ignorant people, not realizing their responsibilities. No matter what the foundation may be it is almost certain that the attitude of the parents has a great bearing upon the future of the young criminal.

"We find the young criminal has mixed with the corner gangs at an age when his every attention should have been upon the furtherance of his education.

"We find, for instance, that practically every one of these young criminals started their careers of crime when they were little more than children, reared in neglect and poverty.

"We find them engaged in petty thefts, stealing from parked automobiles, breaking into unoccupied bungalows, stealing what they think is junk, and often with the knowledge of their parents. Parents should have serious talks with their children about their futures, instilling into their minds the desire for honorable careers and worthwhile endeavor. But instead these boy criminals and thousands upon thousands of others like them are allowed to drift without any thought by their parents, they are permitted to gather in surroundings and companionship which lead to no other future than the reform school.

"We find the young criminal traveling from the reform school to the County prison, from the County prison to the penitentiary, with rarely a thought towards his true reformation, but always associated with the foul-minded and dangerous older criminal, and later we find him a professor of crime and he like others carries on his recruiting, which finally at the end leads him to the penitentiary or the electric chair."

State Starts New Plan To Curb Accidents

HARRISBURG, May 28—The State has started a new plan for reducing violations of the motor code and subsequent reckless driving by giving motorists two warnings before prosecuting.

The department of revenue announced today that highway patrol sub-stations had received notices of this plan:

The first violations will be made a part of the individual motorist's record and a letter of warning will be sent out to him by the director of safety.

After a second violation is reported, an additional warning will be mailed. After a third complaint, the driver will be cited for a hearing by the department to show why his operator's license should not be suspended or revoked.

Warnings to drivers from outside the State will be handled in the same manner.

OIL RESERVES MEAN MUCH IN EVENT OF WAR

Both United States and Russia
Are in Strategic Position

SEE HEAVY DEMAND

By Pierre J. Huns
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN, May 28—(INS)—Gushing oilfields in America and Russia may prove the decisive winning factor of the next major war.

Far-seeing military observers and economic experts, sizing up the inner and outer situations that will have to be faced by Germany and others in case of European conflict, are looking with worried frowns at the super-mechanization of armies and foresee almost insurmountable consequences.

A baffling problem is that of motor fuels and lubricating oils for armies on the march, each of which in wartime would rapidly consume more than the normal world production.

It is estimated that the leading powers would, if fighting each other, run short of mobile power within several weeks from the start of war because of lack of fuel and oils.

Even America and Russia, overflowing with this lifeblood of modern fighting forces, could not carry on with normal production during wartime for longer than six months. For today's armies, navies and air forces are voracious in their appetite.

Synthetic production of gas and oil as now practiced by several European powers is not considered sufficient to take up the slack, although it helps.

Writing at length on this very subject in the leading German economic magazine "The German Economist," Dr. F. Friedensburg summarizes the situation as follows:

1.—Oil needs of every military power in case of war will reach 12 to 20 million tons annually or several times that of peace production.

2.—Self-supply is possible only for the United States and Russia and even for those two, in view of domestic requirements and enormous transportation distances involved in case of war, difficulties are certain.

3.—For other countries, requirements in the given amounts cannot be fulfilled even with free unhampered importing of the stuff.

4.—Synthetic manufacturing of fuel and lubricating oils has significance only in coal-rich countries, although grave financial obstacles of such character intervene as to render complete or partial production of oil needs for war requirements impossible.

5.—Substitutes introduced up to now are quantitatively insufficient.

6.—Sole possibility remaining for earth-ol-poor countries is that of accumulating large reserve oil stores; here also are encountered financial and technical difficulties. Up to now no military power seems to have stored up a large part of its war needs.

The writer recalls that in 1914 after the Battle of the Marne, Joffre telegraphed all French commanders that unless munition production was speeded up tremendously and transported they would have to sue for peace within 14 days. Only the fact that the Germans also were unable to replenish their advance armies with rapid munition supplies saved the French and stayed off defeat.

It is interesting to point out that the German armed forces, partly as result of lessons learned on Spanish battlefields, have called a halt on super-mechanization and undoubtedly will cut down fuel and oil requirements in peace and wartime by thousands of tons.

CALL FIVE OF 18 DEFENDANTS CHARGED WITH UNLAWFUL MANUFACTURE OF LIQUOR; FIRST CASE IMPLICATES FIVE MEN ARRESTED IN A RAID

Much Testimony Recorded in Case of Israel Meltzer, Lower Makefield Township, and Mattie Glickstein, Phila.—Huge
Still Found On the Premises A Few Months Ago

DOYLESTOWN, May 28—Five out of 18 defendants charged with unlawful manufacture of liquor, were called for trial in Bucks county criminal court, yesterday.

The first of two cases called implicated five men arrested in a raid on a large still in Lower Makefield township near Dolington, on March 9th, State Liquor Control Board Agents conducted the raid.

The defendants on trial before Judge Samuel E. Shull, of Stroudsburg, are Benny Campbell and Henry Campbell, colored, of Philadelphia, and Harry Sitwerg, who entered pleas of guilty; Israel Meltzer, of Lower Makefield township, and Mattie Glickstein, of Philadelphia, who are standing trial before a jury.

One of the largest stills ever confiscated in Bucks county, was secured in the raid on the farm of the defendant Meltzer, a cattle dealer.

The prosecution is in charge of Assistant District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn. The defendants are represented by Howard I. James, of Bristol, and J. Leslie Kileoyne, of Bristol.

The charges against the defendants are unlawful manufacture of alcohol and alcoholic liquid, unlawful possession of liquor, conspiracy to manufacture and possess alcohol and alcoholic liquid.

Glickstein was arrested by agents after the main raid on the Meltzer farm.

Seven of the 19 jurors called in the case were challenged, most of them by the defense attorneys.

Charged with involuntary manslaughter in connection with the death of William J. Buckley, a Buckingham youth, who died in the Emergency Hospital, May 6, following an automobile accident, George DeHaven, 16, of Holicon, went on trial before Judge Calvin S. Boyer on Wednesday afternoon.

DeHaven was acquitted on the charge, but directed to pay the costs. During the case Judge Boyer stated that he wished every 16-year-old Bucks county automobile driver was in court yesterday. "Youth may be more skillful, but it is not mature enough in judgment to see danger ahead. If the court had its way, no boy in Bucks county, 16 years of age, would get a driver's license. It is human nature for a 16-year-old boy to be adventure-risks, to like excitement, and to take risks, all of which means death or serious accidents."

State Highway Patrolman Fred Arcamone, of the local sub-station, who investigated the accident and was with young Buckley when he passed away

ELKS HOLD BANQUET ON 32ND ANNIVERSARY

One Hundred and Seventy-
Five Members and Guests
Are in Attendance

AN ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

The 32nd anniversary of the Bristol Lodge, No. 970, B. P. O. Elks, was held last evening in the Elks' Home here when 175 members and guests gathered to mark the founding of the Bristol lodge, to pay tribute to a past exalted ruler, and to enjoy an evening of entertainment.

Howard I. James acted as toastmaster at the dinner of roast young turkey. Mr. James has gained the title of "Perennial Toastmaster" and the distinction of acting in such capacity for each of the 32 years that the lodge has been in existence.

The toastmaster greeted the group and extended a cordial welcome to the guests present and he also gave a report of the condition of the lodge. The report indicated that there are now more than 350 members of the organization. Several members arose when Mr. James asked for a roll call of the 22 still living charter members.

A brief sketch of the activities of the Bristol lodge was given by the toastmaster who told of the American Red Cross citation for the prompt turning over of the entire Elks' Home to sufferers of the influenza epidemic of 1916.

Mr. James then spoke in appreciation of the outstanding work of the past exalted ruler, Maxwell J. Gordon, and as a token of the lodge's appreciation Mr. Gordon was presented with a beautiful watch with the inscription: "Presented by Bristol Lodge, No. 970, B. P. O. Elks to Exalted Ruler Maxwell J. Gordon, 1936-37." The house committee which functioned last year also made a presentation to Mr. Gordon when he was presented with a gold watch chain and charm.

Following a short reply by Mr. Gordon the toastmaster called on Charles G. Rathke, exalted ruler, who spoke briefly and urged co-operation of the members and officers for the work of the coming year.

After the dinner, at which Silvio Ciotti entertained on the accordion, the group was entertained by some excellent vaudeville acts which were well received.

in the hospital, testified that the defendant told him he was going between 50 and 55 miles an hour in a model T '29 car when it left the highway on Old York Road, near Furlong, May 6.

DeHaven had passed one car and was attempting to pass another when his car left the roadbed, ran up along the side of an embankment, toppled over and landed on its four wheels nosing in the bank.

William Hennessy, 17, who was one of the passengers in the defendant's car, testified that he was knocked out and didn't recall a thing except hitting the bank.

Henry McCauley, a Philadelphia motorist, who was operating one of the cars which the defendant passed, testified DeHaven was going at a fairly high rate of speed. His wife, Anna, who was riding with him, estimated the speed to be about 50 miles an hour.

Dr. William I. Westcott, County Seat physician, in his testimony, revealed

May End Strike

Youngstown, Ohio, May 28—Interventions from Washington or by Governor Martin L. Davey of Ohio, are regarded today as the most expedient means of achieving a quick settlement of the CIO strike against three adamant independent steel companies in five Great Lake states.

More than 20,000 men were mobilized for picketing duty in the Mahoning Valley here today, as an estimated 80,000 or more remained idle in other states in the first great steel strike since 1919.

Meanwhile, other independents maintained a wary eye on the walk-out, fearing the strike may spread from Republic Steel, Youngstown Sheet and Tube and Inland Steel to their plants. Indications were, however, that S. W. O. C. leaders have decided to keep the strike within its present limits before turning into other states. Sporadic violence continued throughout the strike area today although no serious encounters were reported. Only a few thin whiffs of smoke from the plant of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, operating under a CIO contract, clouded the sky from which the familiar red glow of the steel furnaces was gone. The hammer and clank of the mills had been reduced to the jeering of pickets and yells of the strikers.

It was learned from a confidential source that labor officials in Washington are anxious for a quick settlement of the strike which entered its second day today in steel mills, fanning out from Buffalo to Chicago. About 50,000 are idle in Ohio and 53,000 in this section.

SCIENCE CANNOT EXPLAIN IT

Scientists have a habit of going off half-cocked. Inspirations are announced as scientific conclusions without benefit of research, with the result that a lot of silly, half-baked ideas are advertised as scientific facts.

Not all men of science are so easily duped, however. Some keep their original ideas to themselves until they are proved or disproved.

Apparently, Dr. Albert Einstein is such a man. When one of his correspondents sought to explain the phenomenon of falling in love by the fact that part of the time the inhabitants of this globe are standing head down and that while in this position there may be a tendency to do foolish things, Herr Einstein replied simply:

"Falling in love is by no means the most foolish thing mankind does—but gravity cannot be blamed for that."

It is a wise scientist who does not attempt to explain why two pairs of eyes can look into each other and leave two persons in love. There are some imponderables science ponders on without jumping at conclusions. And one of them is this thing called love.

Relativity, the fourth dimension, evolution and the technical processes of life are simple addition compared to the mysteries of love.

THE FEWER THE BETTER

Man's chief inhumanity to man is the self-imposed requirement of a coat and other unnecessary items of apparel in the good old, hot old summertime. If he had as much sense as the weaker—but indisputably cagier—sex he would wear as few clothes as she does when the mercury is batting in the nineties. It is one of those customs peculiar to the male that he swelters in full attire and the female is comfortable in half as much.

There is some evidence that man is approaching the point where soon he may achieve a sartorial proclamation emancipation. He may shake off the fetters—in this case a tie and hat and coat and vest—which bind him and come out for larger expanses of white space. He may, although he would never admit the source of inspiration, take a cue from the female of species and become comfortable.

Meanwhile it is the city slicker who does most of the suffering. Not only is it hotter in the cities, but the conventions are more rigid. In the small town men have been taking off their coats for time out of mind, and in some rural areas never had them on. Now as the rural population drifts to urban centers, perhaps the lads from the farms will import their ideas about the necessity of summer freedom. As our collar wilts, we hope so.

Delaware legislators find they adjourned without appropriating funds for the schools. Thus the children will grow up knowing nothing and only fit for legislative life.

A lawsuit brought against Aimee by one of the sister angels has been settled out of court, the girls agreeing to split the publicity.

It is believed that about 90 per cent of the remarks bandied on Page 1 at this time couldn't be said with flowers.

"Rich Girl-Poor Girl" by FAITH BALDWIN

CHAPTER XXI

On the dance floor Jonathan acquitted himself well enough, thanks to Sally's recent instruction, and it amused rather than irritated him to find that Phil Dexter regarded him with open hostility, in the light of a rival. He said as much to Sally, during the second week-end.

They were dancing at the Club. Her deft hair brushed his cheek. She asked, smiling, "Well, aren't you?"

Jonathan, considerably taken aback, exclaimed, "My dear child!" in tones of the utmost astonishment and Sally laughed up at him under the frowning regard of Dexter, revolving nearby with a chattering girl in his arms.

"That's not very complimentary," she reproached him lightly, "but perhaps you can be persuaded."

It was all very frivolous and, he admitted, a lot of fun. He hadn't, of course, had very much fun . . . as these young people regarded it . . . in all his life. He had worked too hard, been too occupied. It was at once relaxing and stimulating to be a part of Sally's world, a world of well-dressed, rather hard, but attractive youngsters, who danced well, and held their liquor, as a rule, even better, who talked glibly and idly of New York and Paris, London and Capri, Del Monte and Palm Springs, Budapest and Shanghai. There was something seductive in the smooth easiness of their well oiled lives, and Jonathan told himself that it couldn't possibly do him any harm, and besides, he owed it to the Suttons not to be gratuitously rude. Of their many invitations he had accepted a few only; surely those few could not be counted against him.

He was amazed to find that he kept apologizing for these lapses into frivolity to Rose Ward. Rose looked at him serenely enough but her very blue eyes held a spark of mischief, was it?—or anger? She said carelessly, "What on earth are you stammering about? I think it's grand you had such a good time. It's part of your education to learn how the other . . . shall we say one percent?—lives."

Somehow he had no answer for that, and disliked it very much.

He saw Rose several times a week. They had, he believed, settled into a pleasant, and, yes, exciting companionship. Sally—Sally was different. If he had kissed her once or twice—he hadn't really kept count—it had all been as she herself had said in the spirit of good clean fun. Nothing serious, no thought of that on either side. Sally was a born trifter and said so frankly. And while he, Jonathan, hadn't had any experience in trifling, he was learning fast and getting quite a kick out of it. All this had nothing to do with the genuine and deep affection he had for Rose. Talking with Sally was like eating caviar and sour cream and petit fours. Talking with Rose was like setting your teeth in the crust of home-baked bread, sweet, nourishing.

Now and then after he had been with Rose he found himself wondering if he were in love with her. If being excited by a girl were to be with her, if wanting to argue with her, laugh with her, being in love, why then he supposed he was. But he hadn't received the slightest encouragement of the sort, that is, which Sally afforded him, and he supposed, fairly enough, almost any other man who might happen to strike her fancy. Rose always seemed glad to see him and appeared to like him very much—but that was as far as it went. There had grown up between them an intangible barrier, one to which he could put no name, one he merely felt existed. He could have sworn that it hadn't been there in the early stages of their acquaintance.

He did not see her alone always. Bill Lynd was there much of the time and there were other young men, friends of hers and of Lynd's whom he had met when he first came to Riverport. These constituted an interesting and progressive group, all of them under thirty. Two of them particularly engaged his attention; Fred Bates, a young lawyer, and Sam Patten, who published and edited a little weekly sheet which was run in direct opposition to the local daily paper which, it was said, Sutton controlled.

At first Bates and Patten, Bill and the others had talked very freely in Jonathan's presence. He had spread before him lavishly all that they intended to do when the day came which would see them and their kind in control of the town. But lately, whenever he had walked in on such a gathering, at Rose's or at Lynd's sister's or at the Club to which Bill belonged and to which he had introduced Jonathan, he noticed that the conversation died a sudden death or became much more general. He asked Rose about it, late that winter.

"What's wrong with your gang, Rose . . . ? They're beginning to look on me as if I had a dread disease or something—not that they aren't pleasant and friendly enough, I don't mean that . . ."

Rose remarked, after a moment, "You can't run with both packs, Jon."

"I see. The Suttons?" He frowned. "But that's absurd," he burst out, "just because I'm friendly with the Senator and Sally . . ."

"Perhaps. But you see Fred and Sam and Bill and a lot of us aren't friendly with the Senator or Sally and we don't like anything they stand for—and if in the enemy's camp . . ."

"But I'm not, I tell you," he said angrily. "I do think you over-estimate, shall we say, the Sutton influence and all that. Of course I can see your point in some ways. But I believe that what's happened to all of you principally is that you've got a Cause. And people with a Cause are apt to go off the deep end. Sutton isn't such a bogie man as you seem to think . . . And—well, look here, Rose, I'm on the fence, you know that."

"It's an uncomfortable position," she warned him quietly, "for one of these days you'll have to fall off. I don't know which way, but I have a pretty good idea. Don't bother your head about us. We have a pretty good time. We haven't got anywhere yet, but we will. I think we'll get a candidate or two in the next elections even if the mayorality is, as usual, fixed. These things take time. We don't expect actual reform overnight."

Jonathan shook his head at her. He said,

"When a girl as pretty as you begins to bother her head—"

Rose flushed. She interrupted swiftly, "The Sutton influence again? I'm not accustomed to pretty speeches. Someone has to bother their head, Jonathan, we can't go on like this forever." He asked stubbornly, "Where would Riverport be without Sutton?"

"Oh, it would be here," she replied, "right where it is now, if you are speaking geographically. It would have perhaps fewer parks and no handstand and perhaps it would struggle along without a public building or so. The kids would have to survive without their annual picnic and prize-giving at graduation wouldn't be as lavish or parades on holidays as colorful. On the other hand, we might have a daily newspaper which wouldn't be a mouthpiece and we might have a mayor who didn't take orders from the Hill. We might have relief workers who knew their jobs or passengers' accommodations. In the nose and in the tail of the planes will be private cabins, with regular cabins, a dining salon, two dressing rooms, a lounge cabin and a completely equipped galley in between. Hot, as well as cold, water is a standard facility on these planes.

Huge 72-Passenger Planes For The Atlantic Crossing

In the bottom deck, the hold, will be stored the heavy cargo, in a series of water-tight compartments running the length of the ship.

The new Wright twin-row radial engines are the most powerful unit built to date, the four in each plane developing 6,000 horsepower with a cruising range of 5,000 miles at about 200 miles an hour.

These new ships will be ready for service about November of this year. That wide cruising range and speed means that these ships, if Pan-American be willing, could fly straight from New York to London without a stop in about 20 hours.

But Pan-American is not out to establish speed records. It seeks to found a dependable airway between the old world and the new. It is not alone in this desire.

Imperial Airways is another contender in the field.

Imperial has an excellent record as a continental airway and is already operating huge four-motored flying boats along its routes to Africa. It is planning the development of even bigger ships for its trans-Atlantic planes which will get under way with even more vigor than at present when the line moves to its new base at Portsmouth, Eng., shortly.

Germany also has an airline experimenting with seaplane operation between the two continents using rebuilt freighters floating in mid-Atlantic as service stations enroute.

Lastly, Air-France has more than an onlooker's interest in these events. The line has constructed a huge seaplane base almost in the heart of Paris and is rushing the building of huge new seaplanes for a DIRECT route between Paris and New York. If they do fly direct between the two points, there is no doubt but what the French company will be flying the fastest schedules.

Outside of that, the matter of speed competition will be decided by what line intends to stop when and where and for how long.

Fares and other business matters, of course, have not yet even been thought of. Certainly the plane fares will not be a great deal less, or more, than was the Hindenburg's $450 one way passage.

But if things keep on at the present rate, it won't be long before you can walk down to a river pier, climb in a "taxi-plane" and say:

"London, cabbie, by way of Bermuda and Paris."

Call 5 of 18 Defendants; Unlawful Liquor Charge

the dead youth died of a broken neck and other injuries.

Woodrow McIlmoyle, of Lahaska, who was returning from the Edison skating rink with John Shack, of New Hope, testified that he couldn't remember the defendant passing because he was slouched in the seat of the car to keep warm. Shack said DeHaven was going fast and gave no warning of his attempting to pass on a slight curve in the highway.

Taking the stand in his own defense, George DeHaven, 16, of Holicong, yesterday told his version of the accident which resulted in the death of a friend of his.

"I was going 45 or 50 when I attempted to pass the car in front of me. The car swerved out into the road a little and made me get off into the dirt. I did sound my horn in passing both cars," said the youth.

"I don't remember anything after my car first went into the ditch. I got my license to drive February 28, 1937. Buckley was on the outer side, Hennessy sat next to me all on the same seat. The top was down."

In the absence of counsel for the defendant, the Court appointed Charles Roberts, Jr., of Newtown, to serve as the defense attorney.

Mrs. Ruth DeHaven, mother of the defendant; Mrs. Stella Hampton, wife of a Holicong merchant; Miss Miriam Broadhurst, of Holicong, and Nellie DeHaven, a sister of the defendant, served as character witnesses.

Both Mrs. Hampton and Miss Broadhurst, when questioned by District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn, admitted they heard the defendant's name linked with those of other 16-year-old fast drivers.

"George is not one of the fastest," said Miss Broadhurst.

"We have quite a few fast drivers in our community," said Mrs. Hampton.

"The reason George was not 'the fastest,' although his name was mentioned in the 16-year-old class of fast drivers, may have been the limitations of his car," District Attorney Eastburn interjected.

DeHaven admitted on the stand he did not believe his car could go more than 60 miles an hour.

"I meant to 'take both cars at once' and did not put on the brakes because I did not have time. I was not trying to beat Shack home," said the youth.

During Wednesday's session of the trial, DeHaven broke down and wept while sitting in prisoners' row before being taken out of the court room grieving over the death of his pal.

Lawrence Durnan, Upper Black Eddy, 35-year-old father of four children, who was convicted by a jury Wednesday afternoon on a charge of aggravated assault and battery and assault and battery, which grew out of an alleged attack on Mrs. Elizabeth Hilbert while taking her home from a tap room, was given a suspended sentence by Judge Calvin S. Boyer on condition that he pay the costs of prosecution and a physician's bill of $109.

Durnan was directed to abstain from all alcoholic beverages during a two-year probation period by Judge Boyer, in addition to paying $10 a month to Mrs. Hilbert toward remunerating her for a medical bill and operation on a broken nose which will cost $75.

"The Bucks county criminal court is not a collection agency," declared District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn on Wednesday afternoon when Felix R. Mosig, of New Hope, charged with larceny by bailee and fraudulent conversion, testified that he took the advice of an attorney and sold $289.65 worth of his employer's chickens toward back payment in wages.

Mosig was arrested by Jacob Tullin, Eureka farmer and Philadelphia junior high school mathematics teacher, charged with selling between 600 and 700 chickens valued at $700. A bill of sale revealed the sum of $289 paid for the sale of chickens from a farm on which the defendant was employed.

When Judge Calvin S. Boyer heard Mosig testify that he took the advice of a well known attorney in selling the chickens, the Court directed a verdict of not guilty and placed the costs of prosecution on the county.

"This is a civil dispute so far as this case is concerned, but uncivil so far as feelings are concerned," Judge Boyer remarked.

District Attorney Eastburn made a motion for a directed verdict of not guilty when he learned from testimony offered by an attorney that he had advised the defendant to take the course of action resulting in the sale of the chickens.

"The element of fraud is removed and the case assumes the aspect of a civil suit. We are not running a collection agency. It does not appear that the defendant stole the chickens," said the District Attorney.

Convictions are few and far between at this term of Bucks county criminal court, due in most instances to the trivial cases that have been returned by Justices for trial.

Yesterday was no exception in Judge Shull's court, where two more defendants were acquitted but directed to pay the costs. In both instances the verdict of not guilty was directed by Judge Shull who submitted the decision of costs to the jury.

Kaple Miller, Morrisville junk dealer, who purchased 24 cents worth of junk from a 9-year-old Scrappletown youth, who wanted to get enough money to go to the movies, was declared not guilty in a directed verdict, but they placed the costs on Miller.

Vernon Hovatter, 9, declared that his dad had not been paid and he did not want to borrow money from his mother, whom he asked if he could break up an old piano and sell the lead. The boy's mother granted the request and Miller bought the lead together with an old bed and some pipe for 24 cents. There was a dispute as to who owned the pipe and that caused Miller's arrest. Judge Shull informed Assistant District Attorney Edward G. Biester that he could not see where a case had been made out under the act because the transaction was more or less made by the 9-year-old boy after he had first talked with his mother about selling the junk.

Stewart West, colored, of Philadelphia, went on trial yesterday afternoon before a jury in Judge Shull's court, charged on three counts of assault and battery by automobile. Judge Shull, after hearing the evidence, directed a verdict of not guilty, but sent the case to the jury on the matter of costs. The jury placed the costs on West.

Howard I. Leister, Croydon: Charge, unlawfully holding himself forth as an architect without being so registered; pleaded guilty; sentence suspended on condition that he pay the costs on two bills.

FRESHMEN WIN BASEBALL CHAMPIONSHIP

For the third consecutive year, intramural baseball, which was originated by Coach Bill Dougherty at Bristol High School, met high favor among the students. The teams participating on the tourney were: the Freshmen, Sophomores, Juniors and Seniors with members of the varsity baseball squad acting as captains of their respective classes.

In the first round the Freshmen defeated the Sophomores by the overwhelming score of 19-9 while the seniors fought a hard battle to win over the Junior by the score of 11-10.

In the play-off game the Freshmen, under the leadership of Hardy Johnson and Barney Ludwig, outplayed the graduating class by a 4-2 score.

The Seniors won the plaque when they were second year men and when Juniors. Now, for the first time they lost their title and will have to graduate without the championship in their possession.

SPRING SUGGESTS THE RE-PAINTING OF SOME OF FURNITURE

By Edna Stephany

Home Economics Representative

Sunshine has a way of showing up worn and battered pieces of furniture. There is usually some piece that calls out for fresh paint each spring. This gives us a grand opportunity to work out a new and pleasing color scheme.

Whether it be a chair, table, cupboard, bed or bureau to be painted the first step is to prepare the surface. Remove all unnecessary decorations then wash with sal soda to clean off the grease and dirt. Sanding produces a surface to which paint will adhere. If the old paint is chipped, sand these places to make the surface as smooth as possible. Apply paint to these bare places before coating the whole surface.

Flat paint should be thinned with turpentine for a first coat. This is allowed to dry at least 24 hours before sanding lightly and applying a second coat.

The color of the paint used will depend upon the color plan of the room. Wall paper or furnishings in the room may serve as key to the color scheme. Soft colors are best because brilliant colors look amateurish and rarely fit into the scheme.

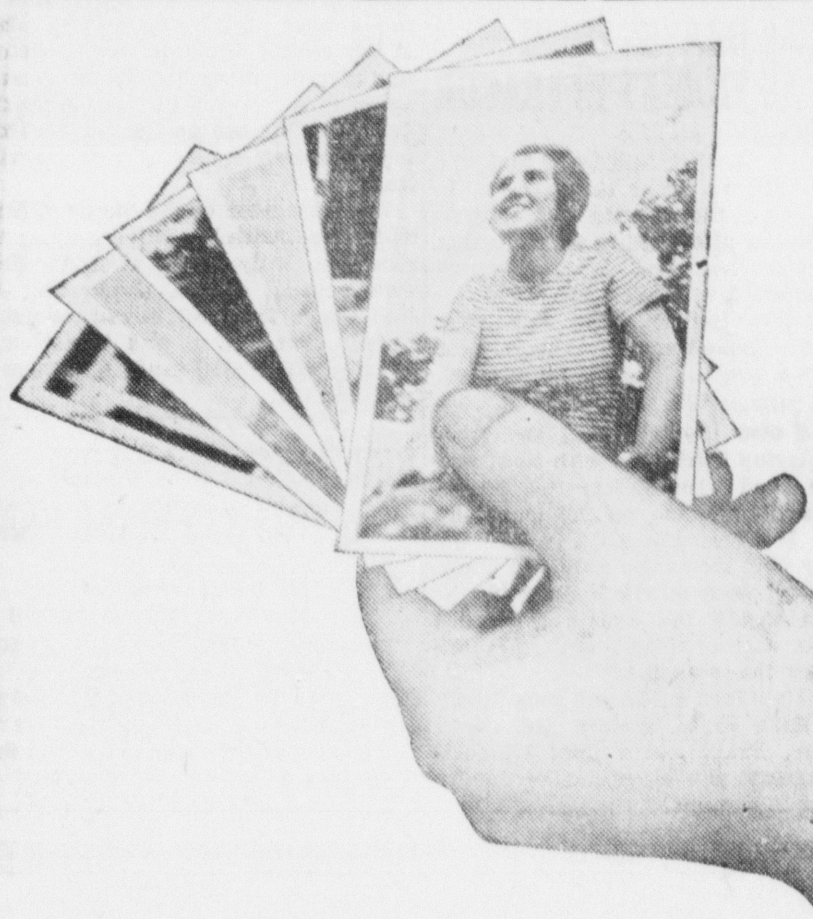

Experiment with color on a small board before doing the entire job. If the paint isn't light enough add white; if it needs to be darker add a small amount of brown or gray. Colors may contrast in darkness and light.

be dulled or softened by the addition of a small amount of their complementary color. The more that is added the greyer the color becomes. Green and red are compliments as are blue and orange, also purple and yellow.

Furniture that is painted one color without trimming is always a safe and often the wisest choice. If two colors are used have the trim follow the structural lines of the furniture and use colors that do not make a strong

In cupboards a lining color will give a more pleasing effect than painting the panels and knobs on the outside. The edge of a shelf or inside of a door is another variation. Avoid too much trim or "hit and miss" spots of contrasting color on chair rounds and legs. A more suitable place for contrasting color is the edge of a chair seat, the arms, the piece across back, or the back spindles. An interesting effect is secured on a plain chair by the addition of a chintz or print pad made to fit the seat.

BRISTOL HIGH J. V.'S DEFEAT BENSALEM NINE

By Herman Corn
Closing their Junior School baseball season with plenty of vim and vigor which they had never shown before, the Bristol High J. V. won a no hit, no run game from the little Owls of Bensalem as they scored a 7 to 0 striking victory, thus winning the Junior High School League championship.

Through the shatter-proof pitching of "Ot" Grimes, the locals had an easy time of it. Grimes did everything the best way. He didn't allow a hit, nor a run, or a base on balls. During the whole seven innings only one man of the visitors reached first and this was by virtue of an error. To his opponents' 6 strike-outs, our local wizard of gravel diamond, whiffed 10 men and also slammed out one hit out of his three trips to the plate.

The Red and Grey had two big innings, one in the third and one in the seventh. In the third, two of their three tallies were brought in by a ringing triple which was hit by the bat of Bud Carter. A little later he was brought in on an error made by Bensalem's pitcher. To start it off in the seventh, Bono and Peterpaul were given tokens to first base. Then, Bill Suffas hit a long fly in deep center field and by the time the fielder had the ball in the infield, the local boys registered two runs. The other run in that canto was scored by Carter who was hurried by "Barney" Ludwig's single in center field. This accounted for six of the seven runs, the remaining run was sent across the plate in the sixth inning.

TWO NEW FACES WILL BE SEEN IN ST. ANN'S ARENA

Two new faces will be seen on the St. Ann's A. A. amateur boxing card for Monday night. They are James "Jackrabbit" Nunn and Sammy Sindora. It will be the first bout for both of these novices who will fight under the colors of the St. Ann's organization. Nunn is a colored youth who has been in training for quite some time. Ten bouts will be listed and each is good enough to be listed as a wind-up on any amateur boxing card. Matchmaker Sammy Moffo had to go through quite a bit of difficulty to secure this card for the holiday. The bouts will be held in the St. Ann's arena with the sanction of the Middle Atlantic district of the A. A. U.

Nunn faces a colored boy from the Wharton A. C., Frank Brown. Brown has had five fights and has a little experience. Both boys fight in the 145 lb. class. Sindora is meeting a veteran in Johnny Giordano, Seymour. Giordano has been in several tournaments and at one time held the 145 lb. championship. But this does not scare the St. Ann's fighter who wants the crack at the Seymour mittman.

Vince Delia is in for a stiffer engagement than he had against "Happy" Riddle because he is facing none other than one of the hardest hitting 126 pounders in the amateur ranks. His opponent is Benny Arizzi of the Masons. Arizzi in his last appearance here conquered Karl Schmidt. This bout should be worth the admission alone as both Delia and Arizzi are the slugger type of fighters.

Tally Sciarra was missing from the opening card because his opponent came in overweight but he is certain to appear this week, meeting Herman Matteo, Seymour. Matteo fought here last season on several occasions and holds a win over Angelo Mocerri, St. Ann's boxer. If Sciarra succeeds in beating Matteo he will rise to the high ranks as Matteo was in the finals of the Golden Glove tournament in Philadelphia.

The return engagement between Sylvester Purnell, St. Ann's, and Nelson Canty, Wharton, has been okayed by the A. A. U. and the local fans are hoping that these boys will put on another battle like the opening.

The bout that many fight clubs were after has also been secured by Moffo. It is the one between "Happy" Riddle, Sun Village, and "Billy" Crawford, Daggert. Both of these boys are well known in this section and are crowd-pleasing fighters. It will be the first appearance for Crawford in Bristol.

Since he stopped Delia in the Mutual Aid hall two winters ago.
Reserved tickets are now on sale and can be secured by phoning the St. Ann's club-house, 9934, or getting in touch with Charles P. Alta.

EDGELEY BRAVES LOOM AS THREAT IN LEAGUE

Having hit their stride at last, the Edgely Braves loom as a threat to the teams of the Trenton City League. The Braves after losing four straight have won their last three tilts and have climbed to fourth place and are edging the leaders. The Edgelyites will be at home tomorrow, meeting the Newtown Bruins at 3:15 p. m.

The Hibbsmen are anxious to gain ground over the week-end and Monday, playing three tilts with Newtown, Solfos, and the Mercerville teams. Mercerville will be on the local diamond Monday afternoon while the Edgely club meets the Solfos in Trenton. Next week on the home field, the Braves tackle the strong O'Donnell's leaders of the circuit and unbeaten thus far this season.

Manager Fred Hibbs will most likely start Jake Praul against the Newtowners. Praul lost a close 2-1 decision against the other Bucks County club in the first meeting of the clubs, being best in a hill duel with Chapple Matthews. Matthews will hurl for the visitors tomorrow.

Sunday, Hibbs will toss Ike Hensell against the Solfos nine. Hensell in his debut last week held the Kaplans to two bingles. Solfos hold third place in the circuit standing and a victory may give the Braves a chance to creep up on them. "Pete" Fiere or "Punkie" Zeffries will work on the mound Monday afternoon against the Mercerville team.

The remainder of the lineup will remain intact with Vic Kilpack doing the receiving, Billy Leigh at first; Heftman, second; Carlin, short; and Joe Roe, third. The outfield will consist of Breslin, Leo Hibbs and Bilger with Freddie Hibbs and Andy Pfaffenrath, alternating.

BENSALEM CONQUERS FALLS IN FINAL GAME

By Bob MacFarland
(Bensalem Press Representative)

Bensalem gained an 11-7 victory over Fallsington on Tuesday, in its final game of the season. The Owls put on a five-run rally in the seventh inning to pull the game out of the fire. With two down and N. Tettemer on first, J. Cahill drove out a clean single sending Tettemer home to tie the score. T. Adams, H. Robinson, L. Tomlinson and J. Bound contributed to the rest of the scoring.

Coach Reimer started Joe Cahill on the mound for Bensalem but he was relieved in the fourth by Hottie Robinson, who baffled the Falls' batters. The Falls' pitchers, Anderson and Jones, were tapped for 12 safe hits.

RAIN HALTS GAME AFTER TWO INNINGS ARE PLAYED

Rain caused the Bristol Twilight League game between the Odd Fellows and the Superior Zinc team to be called off last night after two innings had been played. At the time, Umpire Kervick called the fray, the Oddies had a 6-0 edge, scoring all their tallies in the first.

Tonight two games will be played. Rohm and Haas meets St. Ann's on Leedom's diamond and the Hibernians play the Odd Fellows at Edgely.

The games scheduled for Monday night will begin at 6:30 sharp. Two frays will be played on this night with the Odd Fellows meeting Rohm & Haas at Maple Beach and the Superior Zinc clashing with the Hibernians on Leedom's diamond.
